

Recharge Your Body's Electricity

The human body runs on energy much the same as any electrical system. We now refer to this as the 'bio-electrical system'.

Early Chinese physicians discovered that there is an energy network traversing just below the skin, which communicates from the exterior to the internal organs and structures. This energy works in harmony with all the body's systems. When the energy system becomes blocked the body suffers.

Energy pathways have been widely known in TCM as 'meridians'. These are the pathways which connect the body's energy between organs and the body's many sub-systems, eg: circulatory, endocrine, nervous and digestive. These energy meridians and specific points along the pathways are used in healing modalities such as acupuncture and acupressure. Restoring the flow of energy along these pathways provides energy balance to the body.

This is ANTI-AGEING, and provides pain relief and immune stimulation. The JAI is a small personal portable device which uses a 9 volt battery, and the ultra low current emitted by the unit is transferred to the body via wet conductive wraps applied to either the upper or lower extremities.

The G4Z: This sophisticated tool can be set at different current levels that run on a very low frequency. The cycle frequency again is 23 minutes. In clinical trials the G4Z has been successful in producing cellular regeneration, as well as treating pain (acute and chronic) and wounds (acute and chronic). The G4Z is designed to treat everything from the simplest to the most severe conditions in human pathology, including life threatening diseases in the advanced stages of development termed 'untreatable' and/or 'incurable'.

Herein lies the essence of BHT: it operates simultaneously in the dimensions of matter and energy, regenerating both the forms and functions upon which health and longevity depend. Therapy takes effect immediately at the cellular level, without depending on the digestive and circulatory systems for delivery and without the dangerous side-effects of toxic drugs and invasive surgical procedures. It has both curative and preventative application in human health and healing. Treatment swiftly clears blockages and corrects imbalances in all of the major meridians and sub-channels of the human energy system, restoring the free flow and natural homeostatic balance of energies upon which health and vitality depend.
